

The Board of Health States There is No Order on Lower Broadway, and Those Who Think They Smell Something Should be Equipped With Health Board Xerox.

"What is that terrible odor?" gasped a tourist passing through lower Broadway Friday afternoon.

"Hush," replied the man addressed, who works in that vicinity, adding "you are mistaken when you think there is an odor, for our local health board at the last session said there was no odor for no complaints had been received."

"That may all be," replied the tourist as he hurried away holding his nose firmly between two fingers, "but take it from me if the war was still on I would advise the government to erect a camp on the street so that the soldiers would become accustomed to gas attacks."

For the past few days—board of health to the contrary—there has been distinctly an almost audible "stink" in the lower section of Kingston's busiest thoroughfare, and those forced to walk in that vicinity have felt that it would not be wise to erect a welcome arch of cobblestones at the foot of Ferry street.

For several years past there has been a stench in that section of the city and on some days it is worse than others. The odor has been complained of many times, but the only solution of the problem advanced by the health board was that it was probably due to the high tide in the Rondout creek.

Probably it would be a good idea to have the aldermen adopt an ordinance abolishing tides in the creek.

Beginning Monday the admission price at the evening performance at Keeney's theater, Wall street, will be advanced from 20 to 25 cents, plus the war tax.

In announcing the advance in admission George Gildersleeve, resident manager for O. S. Hathaway, who operates Keeney's theater, said.

"Kingston enjoys the distinction of having the finest and most modern picture palace in New York state, outside of New York city itself, and in that city there are a number of moving picture theaters that cannot compare with Keeney's. The cost of operating this playhouse is tremendous. In fact it cannot be kept open unless it is patronized by thousands of people daily. Kingston with its 16,000 people should turn out great numbers for such a treat as is given them at Keeney's, both from the moral standpoint and that of the picture pictures. I believe that Kingston wants only the best and is willing to pay full value for what it good and as new pictures as are shown in every other large city in the country to charge higher admission prices. But with this advance I want to call attention to the fact that our prices are still lower than those in Newburgh, Poughkeepsie, Hudson, Albany, Schenectady, Utica, Rochester, Glens Falls, Gloversville, Saratoga and many other towns. This in spite of the fact their programs cannot compare in value to what is being given the people of Kingston."

Mr. Gildersleeve also spoke of the big advance in rentals of films. According to his statement they have doubled since the signing of the last contract, and now the distributors refuse to contract for more than a three months' supply.

The price of matinees will remain the same—20 cents for adults and 15 cents for children.

JERSEY TOURISTS

Drawn by Good Roads to Elster in Large Numbers.

The summer there have been more automobiles bearing a New Jersey license plate seen in Ulster county than ever before. Those who make short auto trips from Kingston around the Ashland reservoir, and along the line of the Ulster & Delaware railroad are apt to see as many cars with a New Jersey license as those bearing a New York state license. The reason for this is due to the attractions offered by Ulster county with many attractive summer resorts linked up by state roads. When the Highlands bridge is built the number of cars from New Jersey will undoubtedly be largely increased as motorists as usual run up from Interstate No. 17 to the Ashland reservoir with practically good state roads along entire distance.

Orto Dullivia and his mother who have spent a month at the home of Mrs. Mary Hogan on Broadway, have returned to Hoboken, N. J.

There was a large attendance at the block party Thursday evening and everything passed off in a very satisfactory manner. The entertainment was especially enjoyed. The music was by Melburn's orchestra. The dancing was fine and the cake very better than all sold. The stereoscopic views were well attended and enjoyed. The house on Main street were all "filled up" and the street with extra built-up made the scene very brilliant. The people in Fort Evans and vicinity showed their appreciation of the affair by attending in large numbers. The whole affair was a remarkable success even to the parade. The Chamber of Commerce and Republic League Association, under whose auspices the block party was held, wish to thank every one who in any way contributed to the party and help make it the

FINISH RAILWAY
RATE HEARINGS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Washington, July 31.—Consideration of the advanced railway rate hearings have been completed by the interstate commerce commission and the decision will be handed down late today or Monday, according to the general opinion among railroad men here today.

No indication has been given as to the rate of increase to be granted, but it is believed that it will not be less than thirty-three and one-third per cent on freight rates and one half cent per mile on passenger rates. That the roads will get their full demand of thirty-eight per cent on freight and twenty per cent on passenger is doubted.

Delays in printing and final checking up of the award may prevent its announcement today. It is believed the commission will not announce the decision while the stock market is in session. This may defer the announcement as late as Monday afternoon.

WADSWORTH TO SPEAK MONDAY

James W. Wadsworth, Jr., who has promised to come to this city and make an address before the delegates at the Republican county unofficial convention on Monday. It will be remembered made an interesting address at the county convention about one year ago, and also spoke a few Sundays ago at the First Reformed Church before a large congregation. He is the senior United States Senator, and was elected to that office in 1914, defeating James W. Gerard, Democrat, and Bainbridge Colby, Progressive. His term expires next March. William M. Calder of Brooklyn is his associate as junior Senator, having been elected in 1916. Although he comes of a family distinguished in the public service, none of the forebears of Senator Wadsworth achieved the distinction that is his—that of having been elected as a Senator from the Empire State at the age of 37. His father, twice a member of the New York Assembly, also served as State Comptroller in 1875 and was elected to Congress in 1881, serving until 1885, and again from 1891 to 1907. James W. Wadsworth, Jr., was born at Genesee, N. Y., Aug. 12, 1877. He prepared for college at St. Mark's School at Southold, Mass., and was graduated from Yale with the class of 1898. He enlisted as a private in Battery A, Pennsylvania Field Artillery, and served in the Porto Rican campaign in the summer of that year. Returning home he engaged in live stock raising and general farming near Genesee, and later assumed the management of a ranch in Texas. He married Miss Alice Hay of Washington, D. C., in 1902.

He was elected to the Assembly from Livingston county in 1904, and served in that body through 1910. He was elected Speaker for the session of 1905 and was continued in that post until he retired from the Assembly. Assemblyman Hamm of Wayne county, nominating Mr. Wadsworth for Speaker, said:

"This is but a small honor we are conferring upon him. The people of the state of New York will within a short time choose him for the highest honor within their gift." Later Mr. Wadsworth was talked of for the Governorship.

VACATION SUBSTITUTES

With prices sky-high at the shore and in the mountains many people find it necessary to give up their usual vacation trips, or at the best to content themselves with a week-end excursion or two. In the circumstances discussions of vacation substitutes are inevitable, and these do not stop at the usual recommendations of more open-air exercise in one's own neighborhood. One editor even suggests that a good way to get a useful summer "vacation" is to "stay at home and eat"—meaning, of course, that a tenth of the money spent on an expensive trip would procure many good things to eat which at present prices are indulged in very sparingly by many people at home and that are not provided even at high-priced summer resorts. He says: "There is many a man sniffing the high-priced air of the white, blue, green or otherwise mountains and yearning himself this for a whiff of fried fish. Some strolling, soft-shell crabs, maybe, or flounder fresh from the briny. More than one dainty housewife taps her eager foot on a by-the-month suburban porch, the light of hunger leaping in her eye as the sugar corn goes trucking past on its way to the city." And the ruby melons and luscious fruits!

Not a bad suggestion, but it can be improved on by adding "loaf more" to the advised "eat more." To let up on the daily grind for a while, to be lazy, sleep more, and pamper one's appetite, may put one in better physical shape after a fortnight or a month than a most expensive summer vacation and at a tenth of the cost.

CHATEAU-THIERRY.

It is difficult to realize that only two years have passed since all America, keyed to a high pitch of emotion and standing on the tip-toe of expectation, thrilled to the new name of Chateau-Thierry, the word having been flashed under the sun that there American boys had forced the over-oncoming German veterans back and wrought the first turning of a great and long-running tide. The battle of Chateau-Thierry seems much longer ago than it really was because the thrill of a great hour has been almost lost in the conflicting currents and antitheses that have followed. Mistaken, perplexities, self-seeking, partisanship, recrimination, have tended to dim the brightness of that day of high achievement and to bring a time of doubt with many a time of forgetfulness with some forgetfulness even of the heroic deed.

But in the less troubled conditions and clearer vision of the future the old pride and satisfaction, if not quite the old thrill, will so doubt come back in full. Chateau-Thierry will live imperially among the names of the storied spots of earth where determined right struck insolent might to its fall. Symbol of this expectation found expression when on July 18 France paid fitting honors to the American dead at Chateau-Thierry, our Ambassador, Mr. Wallace, saying: "Here my valiant countrymen, standing side by side with their brothers of France, came hard for the right and spared not, fought, suffered and died, but conquered. It is with solemn pride, inseparable in words, that I recall what they did here for America, for France and for the world, and my hand rises in salute to the living and the dead as their dauntless spirits seem to pass before me upon the very field of their glory."

OUR NEXT BEST CUSTOMER.

There are many reasons for neighborly good feeling between the United States and Canada, such as the identity of original language of the same motherland, the same language, similar laws, and a similarity of the same basic foundation. But even if none of these existed the United States would need to look a friendly eye upon Canada as our biggest customer—farmer the nation with the one exception of England. There is much talk of cultivating trade with South America, but little if any talk of fostering trade relations with Canada, that trade having been for years of such great proportions that we think little about it, taking it as a matter of course. Canadians buy $200,000,000 worth of American merchandise annually, which is more than is bought from us by all South America, Africa, Asia and Oceania combined.

Prior to the war Canada's sales to us nearly balanced her purchases and then the rate of exchange did not seriously interfere with business. During the war Canadian purchases in this country increased enormously and an adverse trade balance was developed. The subsequent discount on the Canadian dollar in this country and other war heritages now restricting trade have caused 200 American manufacturers during the last year to erect or lease plants in Canada. Obviously it is highly desirable that in the case of so valuable a customer as Canada war difficulties or heritages should be removed as soon as possible and that the freest possible trade relations be restored.
